

INNES ON ENGLISH FOOD

- M.I. Innes, welcome back to Mansion Ingles. Today I'd like to ask you about food.

- Innes. Yeah gladly, fire away.

- M.I. English food has a of not being very worldwide. What do you think on that subject?

- Innes. It's definitely an acquired taste,..erm... certainly not the food in England's much more ..err .. the ... the Indian ..em .. influence, the Chinese, the Italian, all of this type of food..erm..is..is now being introduced in England and has become part of our as well.

- M.I. But if we limit it to English food only, what's your English dish, Innes?

- Innes. Personally, .

- M.I. Do you make them at home?

- Innes. no...no...er...it's... it's a special...er...mix of...erm... pretty much the off cuts of pork, mixed in..er.. into a pastry base.

- M.I. Well that sounds . Are there any other types of food that you like from England?

- Innes. Erm..black pudding is particularly nice.

- M.I. And please tell us. What is black pudding?

- Innes. Black pudding is a type of, shall we say a , made from congealed blood from bulls.

- M.I. I see. And the good old English fish 'n' chips is still popular, Do you like it?

- Innes. Very much so. now the ..er..the cod stocks have been er...have been depleted and the is very expensive..er..but no, if I...if I can afford it, very much so.

- M.I. And what is your favourite food?

- Innes. It would have to be , after the pubs shut.

- M.I. Well, thank you very much.

- Innes. Thank you for asking me again Craig.
